Evelyn had been instructed by her mother not to ask anyone for a penny.

A week ago Evelyn was visiting her aunt, and as her aunt opened her purse to take a nickel to use in the telephone Evelyn, shyly glancing in the purse and seeing one lone penny, remarked that she thought pennies were such a nuisance in a big lady's purse.

MEN'S LIVES MARKED BY THE SMALL DEEDS

REVEREND RICHARD M. VAUGHN, FORMER BAPTIST PASTOR, DELIVERS STRONG SERMON.

MARK FINAL JUDGMENT

Sermons to Mankind During Lifetime Decides Final Judgment.—Auditorium Packed at Union Service.

Using the parable of the sheep and goats, from the twenty-fifth chapter of St. Matthew's Gospel, thirty-first to forty-sixth verses, as a text and scripture lesson for his sermon, Rev. Richard M. Vaughn, former pastor of the First Baptist church, brought out that the final judgment on the lives of men would be largely based upon the small, unnoticed deeds committed during their time upon this earth.

Dr. Vaughn addressed an audience which completely filled the auditorium of the Baptist church at the union service last evening. He also gave the morning sermon at the same edifice.

"Judgment will be a time of surprise for most all men," said Dr. Vaughn. "It will be a time when the smaller, unnamed deeds that were committed in the life, deeds that were forgotten and were unnoticed at the time of commission, will be brought to light."

"Judgment brings out one important question. What is most worth while in the lives of men? Some men live for money, others for pleasure, and still others for power."

At this point Dr. Vaughn pointed out that money was not the essential feature in the making of a good Christian and that although money is said to be the root of all evil, it is not evil in itself, but it is a by-product of duty. It must come to them as a result of some deed, which has in turn benefited some one else.

"Those who live for power are not the happy in spirit," and here Rev. Vaughn cited the great Napoleon.

All the blood that he has shed were to be poured into the square wherein stands the lofty column surmounted by his own figure, he would be able to drink without descending from it, and he would be able to gain in this way was not power which would mean a blessing in the final judgment of man. There also people who seek power in a smaller sense, such as socially and among their friends, but all are alike in their spirit.

Then the pastor struck the keynote of his sermon when he pointed out that the only way to live is to live in the question that counts in final judgment is whether or not we have assumed the humbleness of servants, no matter how small the service may be.

Even as the sheep had served the Lord, when he had been needy, not the Lord in person, but mankind, and in this way serving Him indirectly, and for which they were later blessed.

It was the little things, which were unnoticed at the time of their commission, but they were reckoned at the time of judgment. And this same example was brought out in the case of the goats who had served the Lord, but had not noticed that they had been negligent. However, they were cursed and sent away.

"We must all assume the humbleness of servants and watch the little things, and in this way prepare our way when the final judgment does arrive for the blessing and not the curse."

The real truth of our lives will flash upon us at the time of judgment and it will be brought before us very strongly. Then it shall be too late to realize that the gold of life is the kingdom of God, and its eternal service to mankind.

Reverend Vaughn brought out the fact very plainly that character was what a man is in the dark. That it is the habit of a man, the life of a man in his home, that gives the real spirit and reveals the true man. That is the time when the man is not posing. Character is the posing man. The psychology of the moment will come when we are all caught off our guard and caught when not posing.

The speaker went on to say that the honest man was not the man who had to struggle with himself every time he saw the pocketbook of his brother. It was the man who could practice an honest living during his entire life, being honest in the little unnoticed deeds and things not made distinctly important. Life is divided into three divisions. The first is innocence, while we are young, and are good because we know no better. We do not know enough about life to be anything else but good. The next is the age of virtue, when we are good under struggle, when we must strive to be good. The final age and last stage is the age when goodness becomes second nature and we are good without really realizing it. This is when we do the little things of goodness without taking particular note of them, but the things that are brought out so strongly in the final judgment.

There is a decisive hour in every man's life and it is the all important hour too. Dr. Vaughn told of Robert Speer, when the man was a young college fellow. One night after the theatre, while sitting in Delmonico's, he refused to be tempted into dissipation and counted this as the decisive hour in his life. There is a decisive hour in the life of every man.

Judgment brings out the little deeds of badness and punishes them even as she rewards the good ones, and these same deeds may be the ones that have been forgotten and unnoticed at the time. Dr. Vaughn brought out that the crowning point of judgment was the spirit of Jesus. Although born in the manger and with the humblest of beginnings, his life became great. His life is not lessened by the humility of origin, as is shown in the history and lives of most of our historical idols. And it was the same with Jesus.

"Agnosticism has done one thing," said Reverend Vaughn. "It has taught us that God is but a name for the Infinite Power. That no one ever saw Him, no one can explain Him. He is simply a power and we call Him God. However, the only human conception of God is Jesus. And when we say God we really think of Jesus. Jesus is the power of God, and this power comes as a natural consequence. In the judgment of God there is no legal proceeding. The deeds both good and bad are all known to the Creator and He needs no evidence either pro or con. He puts his masterpiece, Jesus, by the side of the life of every man and compares them and in this way places the man before the power of all mankind. Christ is the ideal self in every man."

"Every service to man is a service to God, as is shown in the Scripture in the parable of the last judgment. Every indignity to man is an indignity to God as is also shown in the same lesson. Mankind is a part of God and so our services and indignities to him are services and indignities to God, Himself."

In concluding the sermon he brought out the point in a very distinct manner that God knows all. All of the deeds both right and wrong are communicated to Him and in the final judgment we shall be either rewarded or punished. God is a shepherd and knows the sheep and knows the goats."

Facts About Aged Peddler Found Dead at Cavanaugh Home Wanted By Woman In California.

Mrs. L. F. Spaulding's glancing through the papers from her home town of Battle Creek, Michigan, recently at Redlands, California, may give Janesville authorities somewhat of an insight into the mysterious life of the aged peddler, C. A. Burton, the aged peddler, cheap jewelry, who died on June 10 at the home of Mrs. Ida Cavanaugh, 1531 Ravine street, without revealing any details of his past life or of his relatives.

At the time of the death the police authorities learned Burton had told neighbors that he had a brother residing at Battle Creek, Michigan, and inquired to the Michigan city brought back the information that the Burton in question had departed, his destination being unknown.

It is now known that instead of a brother it was a sister Burton had in Michigan. This was Mrs. L. F. Spaulding. The Battle Creek papers, with an idea of giving publicity to the inquiry, turned the matter over to the local newspaper, which reached Janesville.

Poor master Asa Anderson has interested himself in the case, and he is in contact with the police and other information, including newspaper clippings. She also wrote a brother residing at Rockford and enclosed a photograph of her missing brother, which she had taken at Janesville.

Mrs. Spaulding's glancing over the newspaper had noted the article and also recalled the fact that she had a brother who had been away from home for twenty-two years. She became interested and at once wrote the police authorities asking for a doctor's report and other information, including newspaper clippings. She also wrote a brother residing at Rockford and enclosed a photograph of her missing brother, which she had taken at Janesville.

THE YAGUI AGAIN.

From the earliest history of Mexico the semi-savage tribes of the Yagui Indians in Lower California, have been a problem for the various governments to contend with and have hindered the settlement and development of the vast territory over which they held control. The Christian Soldiers of the Yagui Indians, for the moment the activity of the Yagui Indians may prove unfortunate in that it adds to Mexico's internal disorders, the effect of the outbreak along the west coast of the state of Sonora can scarcely have any bearing on the general situation. It is a fact that on various occasions the opposing Mexican factions have made use of the Yagui Indians in their respective campaigns for control but the chiefs of the revolutionary groups must know the unending habits are identified with some of the least frequented territory of the republic, and it is almost safe to assert that the leaders would be willing to combine their forces in order to quell the rebellious tribe.

The Yaguis have been particularly hostile toward the colonists that occupy land in the Yagui valley, where an irrigation project has been established, and if, as is claimed by the Indians, the land where the colony is located belongs to the tribe, but has been obtained through questionable methods, this wrong ought to be righted as soon as Mexico finds itself in possession of an orderly government. The entire land question of the republic is in such a chaotic condition, however, that it will require extraordinary effort to make restoration complete. With the Mexican population overwhelmingly Indian, the Yagui grievance is but one in a multitude of Indian problems.

Unless you can play it pretty well, to own a watch is a sign of shiftlessness. But the most marked indication of shiftlessness is to own a fox-hound.

You will be glad to learn that two young Americans finally have responded to the insistent demands that somebody walk around the world on stilts.

Tank Beverly says his idea of nothing to see is a bird's-eye view.

A great many men with the ability to gather it in are hopelessly inadequate when it comes to turning it loose.

The bearded lady in the sideshow always has a lot of competition in the audience.

It is better to remain a Rube and be satisfied than to become a Polished Article and take all that goes with it.

rebellions, but that his assumption of power was done at the request of prominent capitalists both Mexican and foreign, who feared Madero and his misrule. However, Huerta is now a prisoner of the United States and the situation is more muddled than ever.

A YEAR AGO.

A year ago a crazed youth shot down the Austrian archduke and as a consequence twelve nations of Europe are now at war. The death of this particular archduke was merely a prelude for the war, but sufficient to bring it about. Billions of dollars have been expended and millions of lives have been lost through the greed and imperial demand for increased power and territory and the end is not yet in sight. Where this titanic struggle will end it is hard to say, but when peace finally is declared the world will be the sufferer as a whole.

CLEARLY NAMED.

No more meritorious nor popular selection could have been made by Governor Philipp in naming M. J. Cleary as the successor of present Incumbent Commissioner. Cleary is thoroughly conversant with the duties of the office and will fill the position of trust conferred upon him without fear or favor. He is an earnest, loyal, capable man, true as steel to his friends, his convictions, his promises and will be a credit to Wisconsin as the next commissioner of insurance.

WHY INDEED?

An exchange says: "What is the idea in appointing a man as secretary of state who had no political backing, can't help to promote party harmony, has rendered no political services, has no demand for repayment, can't deliver a chauntanga lecture, and has absolutely no qualifications for the position except experience, ability, and knowledge of international law?"

Now that the Commercial club have petitioned signed asking the mayor and council to install electric lights on every corner in the residence districts and change the lighting system down town, we can see no further excuse for the continuation of the dangerous and unsightly poles in the business section of the city. The removal of these poles was one of the conditions that the signatures were obtained to the lighting proposition.

Part of the duty of traffic police, particularly on Saturday nights when the streets are thronged with shoppers, is not to visit with friends, but prevent loafers from congregating on corners and blocking sidewalks. The chief of police is doing his utmost to preserve law and order but he has some poor assistants on some of the busiest corners that need attention.

These are grand days for the great game of gold and more players are to be found on the local course than ever before, showing that the game is growing in favor as its beneficial results are becoming better known.

Possibly instead of buying munitions of war in this country if the English government would install a few business efficiency experts in home factories of the American school they might get results.

It is to be hoped that none of the June bridegrooms have thus far discovered that the first cherry pie was manufactured of dried apples.

Uncle Sam is not making any extensive preparations for the celebration of his coming birthday, being in no fear that it will be his last.

Or labor deep down in the mine. Have jobs that for peace and contentment.

All jobs, presidential outside. The night brings repose to the farmer, the millhand, the teamster, the clerk.

But there's nothing in sight now for Woodrow.

But worry, dull care and hard work.

Uncle Abner.

It may be necessary some day to call a special session of congress to amend the ten commandments and the amendment will probably get a few votes at that.

It is getting so the bell ringers don't draw very well anywhere except in the west coast circuit and it's time when bell ringers was the highest form of theatrical entertainment.

These have been a man arrested for speeding with a bicycle for twenty years and the police court used to be full of 'em.

This is the Life.

I shot an arrow into the air, it fell in the distance; I knew not where, till a neighbor said it killed his calf, and I had to pay him six and a half dollars.

Yes, I bought some poison to slay some rats, and a neighbor swore it killed his cats, and rather than argue across the fence I paid him four dollars and fifty cents ($4.50).

One night I got sailing a toy balloon, and I hoped it would soar till it reached the moon, but the candle fell out on a farmer's straw, and he said I must settle up to him.

And this is the way with a random shot, it never hits the proper spot, and a joke you spring that you think so smart may leave a wound in some fellow's heart.

Growing Young.

When I was young and in my prime, And that is looking back some time, A woman who was in love with me, Looked like she hardly was alive.

She wore a cap and set around, And knit and gazed down at the ground.

At fifty she would dress in black, And look like the back end of a hack. But, nowadays, when she's seventy, A woman's party fair to see.

She wears them corsets called "straight fronts."

And does a lot of funny stunts. Is she not prim? Yes, she is not. For she kin do the new fox trot. Instead of waiting to be asked, She has no time to sit and wait. She has no intention for to quit. This sad and mournful tale of tears And keeps on knocking at the doors. She's off somewhere a-plavin' bridge. Or with the young folks at some dance.

And when she has a chance, It's pleasant that this can be told. The women nowadays don't grow old.

When two women go to quarrel, as to which shall have the privilege of paying car fare and neither one opens her purse?

When a $1,000 a year minister gets up and tells an audience of substantial business men how to succeed in life?

When a lady who has never seen anything but East, goes and visits with her sister in law, who has been in the South for years, before her club on "The Ties of the Modern Drama"?

When a man passes a rollup store with his wife and tries to make a conversation with the proprietor on the political situation?

When a newspaper man gets married and says, "With all my worldly goods I thee endow."

These are grand days for the great game of gold and more players are to be found on the local course than ever before, showing that the game is growing in favor as its beneficial results are becoming better known.

Possibly instead of buying munitions of war in this country if the English government would install a few business efficiency experts in home factories of the American school they might get results.

TWO ROBBERIES NET $130 AND NARCOTICS

BROOK SALOON AND W. T. SHERER DRUG STORE PILLAGED SATURDAY NIGHT.

THIEVES KNOW STORES

No Coincident Seen in Two Acts Although Robbers Were Well Versed With Layout of Buildings.

Local talent is credited with two robberies of Saturday which resulted in the loss of $130 at the Brook saloon and $100 at the Sherer drug store at 201 West Milwaukee street. No arrests had been made at noon today, but suspicion and evidence at the police station were strong enough to lead to certain individuals. Both had cleverly planned their work.

Both jobs had every earmark of the work of Janesville thieves. The first was a hold-up in the saloon, the manner in which the deeds were committed easily gave the police the intuition that "hangers-on" about town are guilty.

It was known at exactly what time the robberies were committed, but it is thought that they were simultaneous. The thief at the Brook saloon took money, but nothing else, while the Sherer robber was after "dope."

Well Acquainted.

Behind the Brook saloon and at the corner where the Ziegler store extends to the rear, there is a foot deep pit about four feet square to permit the influx of light to the basement. Two windows open off the side walls, one into the saloon and the other into the basement. One, about five feet from the ground, into the cellar of the saloon. The thief had easy access to the saloon after dropping into the light well, he climbed to the saloon basement window, pushed open the hinged door and was in the building.

Proprietor Gus Hiel for some time past has been receiving his mail after a big day. He has never changed the depositing place in the past three months or more. Saturday night, however, he took $1000 with him and placed the remaining $100 in the old place. It was easy "picking" for the thief. He went directly to the hiding place and pocketed the coin.

Then, apparently to cast off suspicion, he turned to the right and behind the bar, strewn papers and bottles about the floor to make it seem that he at first questioned his knowledge of the private "bank" and only turned to it after some search. He missed a $10 gold piece in a tobacco sack in a pocketbook, however, but he was clever enough to leave the checks in the sack and take the money.

The thief did not take the chance of making his exit in the manner of his entrance. He just went to the rear door, turned the handle and ran. He left a heap of suspicion and incidentally some mystery about his early mauling.

Got Sherer's Drugs.

Three locks failed to stop the intruder at W. T. Sherer's. He knew just where they were placed on the back door that leads from the hall entrance on Franklin street. The door was a jack-in-the-box type, more or less dull, but of sufficient left to cut, with a strong arm behind it, carved a hole in his arm panel large enough to insert his arm and turn the lock and a safety bolt.

He was unable to reach the uppermost lock so smashed the plate glass window to turn this.

The thief, who must have been jingling pretty merrily on Sunday morning for this or these intruders. They were not after money; they wanted "dope." And furthermore, they got what they wanted after, although a whole lot was missed, but that was only incidental, for with the precious little vials of morphine and cocaine in their possession, they were without any hindrance whatever, and little worry of what they left.

The small amount of the drug being the cure was worth about $15, being the cure kept in the subscription cases for daily use in the preparation of physicians' prescriptions. There was more of a much greater value, but this was not secured on just such an expedition.

Nothing else was molested in the store. Everything was in its orderly state yesterday morning when the place was opened.

Detection Chance Small.

The thieves had entrance to the hall in which they were carving out an entrance in the store panel from two different ways. They either entered from Franklin street or through the entrance on Milwaukee street near the billiard hall.

The police department sees no coincidence in the two robberies. It is feared that both were planned by different parties, one bent on the curing of money and the other on the curing of money and the curing of money.

The Sherer drug robbery seems to coincide somewhat with a story prevalent for the week or so about a federal inspector who was sent to investigate Janesville relative to alleged violations of the Harrison anti-narcotic law. The connection between the robbery and the federal investigator is said, from the fact that those addicted to the drug habit, unable to secure their favor from the police, were turning to robbery as a means of getting the drug.

Run Over by Buggy: Jean Robbins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry W. Robbins, 352 Milton avenue, has apparently recovered from minor injuries sustained Sunday when a buggy run over by a car wheel at the intersection of her home. She was riding, and in some way fell out to the walk, allowing the rear wheel to run over her body.

MAJORITY OF VOTERS FAVOR LIGHTING PLAN

COMMERCIAL CLUB COMMITTEE REPORTS NEARLY TWO THOUSAND SIGNATURES SECURED.

PETITION TO COUNCIL

Mayor Fathers Indicates That Proposition Will be Considered Favorably.—Means Removal of Poles.

Nearly two thousand signatures to the Commercial club's petition for a complete system of ornamental street lights for the business district and for the installation of 100 candle power incandescent lamps of the nitrogen type at every street corner, replacing the present arc lights, have been secured according to the report of the lighting committee.

Edward Amperoli, chairman, which was presented today at the weekly meeting of the directors at the Grand Hotel. A motion was passed that the petition be presented to the mayor and city council for their consideration and action.

The present lighting committee of the Commercial club will continue to serve as will its place at the disposal of the city council any information on the subject which they may have gathered from their canvass among the citizens or from any other source.

Mayor Fathers and Councilman Cummings were present at the directors' meeting by special invitation. Mayor Fathers indicated that he was inclined to take favorable action on the proposition which must necessarily be worked out more in detail.

Four petitions were presented, the other was the statement of Mayor Fathers in this connection.

The assurance of the installation of the lighting plan will mean the removal of the poles which line the downtown streets in the opinion of Mayor Fathers and City Attorney Dougherty.

Several of the Commercial club directors stated that in securing signatures to the petition, they had been inclined to take favorable action on the proposition which must necessarily be worked out more in detail.

ROCKFORD WINNER OVER CARDINALS; 17-7; FARCE BALL

Forest City Aggregation "Gates" to Butters and Lam Out Hits at Every Diamond Angle.

Janesville 1, Rockford 0. That was the score at the end of the first inning yesterday. At the end of the ninth it was Rockford won, Janesville 7.

If the Cardinals had had some of the grade school fly catching youngsters in their lineup yesterday afternoon they might have registered another win. But they didn't. Instead, they trotted out nine perfectly good ball players, that is, usually good ones.

Never before did the Cardinals put up an exhibition like that of yesterday. And it is safe to say that they will never repeat it so long as a case of something going wrong, it was one of everything going wrong.

The Cardinals were as free of "pep" as machine oil is of sand.

Y. M. C. A. DEFEATS PARKER PEN NINE

Speedy "Y" Team Gets Away With 9 to 3 Victory.—Ralls Down Lewis to 2.

With Curtis pitching a whirlwind game and every member of the team on his toes, the speedy Y. M. C. A. baseball team annexed their third victory of the season by downing the sturdy Parker Pen company nine 9 to 3 Saturday at the fair grounds. There were no marked features of the game outside of the speedy, consistent playing on the part of both aggregations.

The hitting of the "Y" nine was far superior to their adversaries, with the exception of Sullivan, second base for the Parkers, whose long three bagger was really a sensation. Hemmingwood the men of Illinois and the men of Wisconsin, in which the men from the Badger state won the prize of a box of cigars.

The prize offered for the best looking lad was won by Mrs. D. C. Sullivan, better known as Mary Casey of Madison. It consisted of a beautiful sofa pillow with the following embroidered upon it: "There is a Rose in the City of Wisconsin."

There were short talks given by Mrs. D. C. Sullivan, and aldermen of the city of Madison, W. K. Ellington of Chicago, and aldermen of Janesville and Wisconsin. The latter spoke on the social and beneficial features of the order.

The result of Saturday's games turned a few of the teams around in the standing of the nines. The "Y" team still heads the league with eight wins and one loss. Both the Parker Pen and the Lewis team lowered their percentage. Standing of the teams:

YOUNG GROCER WEDS POPULAR LOCAL GIRL

Waiter La Verne Carle Takes Miss Jessie J. Dudley as Bride at St. Patrick's Church.

The marriage of Waiter La Verne Carle, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Carle, 1306 Highland avenue, to Miss Jessie J. Dudley, the daughter of Nelson Dudley, 808 Holmes street, was solemnized at 1 o'clock this morning by the Rev. Father William Mahoney, assistant pastor at St. Patrick's Catholic church.

Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride. The interior of the home was profusely decorated for the occasion and a large number of guests were present to wish the happy couple a pleasant journey together.

Mr. and Mrs. Carle departed for Plattville following the repast and will spend their honeymoon in the southern part of the state.

After August 1 they will be at home to their many friends at 1306 Highland avenue. Both Mr. Carle and his bride enjoy a wide circle of acquaintances in Janesville. Mr. Carle is affiliated with his father in the grocery business in the first ward and has a bright and promising future.

The Fire Guard and Automatic Heat Regulator

Hundreds of people have been investigating this wonderful device for fuel saving and fire protection the past week. We shall demonstrate this week in the vacant store, corner South River and Pleasant streets. In almost every instance it has been pronounced what we claim for it, a money saver and a protection against fires from overheated chimneys. Do not fail to call this week and see something that will benefit you financially. The Automatic Heat Regulator Co., Reamont DeForest, Secy.

WOMAN'S PAGE

RUTH E. CAMERON

YOU TOLD ME SO.

Do you ever say, "You told me so?" The other day the cautious member of the family warned me that I would find a crowd if I went to a certain place. On account of his caution his warnings are always discounted about fifty per cent. so I spent a good five minutes pointing out to him various reasons why there would be no crowd and why I shouldn't mind if there were. He was still unconvinced, and so was I. Subsequently I went to the place and there was a crowd, in fact a very dense crowd. At first I could find no seat, and when at length I did procure one it was uncomfortable and ill placed. I came home cross and tired. But did I tell the cautious one the next time I saw him, "You told me so?" Hardly! Instead I talked sprightly of shoes and shins and sealing wax and cabbage and kings, and thanked my stars when he forgot to inquire about crowds.

It takes courage and squareness. It seemed to me at the time quite natural and justifiable that I should do so. I felt sure he would have done the same. But afterwards, when I was thinking it over, it came to me that I had the courage and squareness to say, "You told me so," would be a pretty fine thing.

We all think we have a right to say, "I told you so" when events prove us to have been right and our friends wrong, perhaps not in just those words, but in one way or another. Now why should we forget that the right to point out our own wisdom when we have been wise is balanced by a duty to admit our opponent's wisdom when it is the whom events have proven right?

A Right and a Duty. If we waive the right then we may perhaps be exonerated from the duty, but if we claim the right we should remember the duty. No three words in the English language are harder to say than "I was wrong," but their very difficulty makes them a test for moral courage. I wish Kipling had included, "If you can say 'You told me so'" in his list of things that make a man.

Question.—There is a strain of intemperance in my family and my son drinks to excess. He is engaged to a beautiful girl who, I fear, has no knowledge of this fact. I think that married to her he may settle down and be all that he should. I am afraid that if I tell her she may break off the engagement and she will go from bad to worse. What shall I do? Should I tell her?—A Mother.

Answer.—I certainly think you should. She may choose to make the effort to reform him, but I think she should know what she is going into. This is a big question. Perhaps my reader friends think otherwise?

Heart and Home Problems

Letters May Be Addressed To Mrs. Thompson, in Care of The Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: We have often received advice from you and thank you for it. Some of the questions and perplexing questions and would like to have you answer them.

(1) I am a girl, 17 years old, and I am considering proper to play the game called "Truth," in which each tells the others their faults? (2) Do boys like girls that tell them their faults? (3) What is the proper way to act when a young man you are not acquainted with comes to see you with kisses you? (4) What kind of a girl does a boy like? (5) How can you tell when girls are jealous? (6) A friend of mine has been acting queer lately and I wonder what is the matter.

(7) How old should girls be to go with boys? (8) What would you do when a boy says he loves you? (9) What should a girl say when a boy says he loves her? (10) If a girl receives a written apology should she answer it?

(11) It is proper, but not always advisable, because some people are not big enough to listen to their own faults and hard feelings is caused. (12) Some boys sometimes, but I would not advise you to do it. (13) Resent it thoroughly and have nothing more to do with him until he apologizes. (14) There are all kinds of girls and all kinds of boys, and fortunately for everyone a fixed kind is best liked. Remember that like attracts like, and if you want to be attractive to a good class of boys don't permit yourself to become common. (15) Girls show jealousy in different ways, and some have self-control enough not to show it at all. There are various reasons why your friend may be queer.

(16) Seventeen or eighteen. (17) If I were as young as I imagine my girlish giggles are, I would try to keep a boy from knowing such a thing. A girl old enough to receive confessions of love should follow the dictates of her heart in what she says and does. (18) Nothing she says will be effective. She should get up.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Last summer while at the lake I met a young traveling man who was spending his vacation there. After he left the lake he wrote to me regularly and we became acquainted. His routine was a southern one and he used to go to a certain town down there to see another girl about every two weeks. He always told me about it though. I thought very much of him and made him jealous. I wrote to him and told him that I did not care to see him again and I did not want him to write. I told him I was not angry, but just disgusted with his actions. I have never heard from him since and I still care for him. He told me once that he loved me and asked me to marry him. Do you think he meant it? Would you write a letter of apology or wait for him to write?

Traveling men, as a rule, are so unfaithful that it would be best to forget him. However, if you are sure that he would make a good, reliable husband, then I think it would be all right to apologize. Don't be too object if you do write. Without knowing the man I can't tell whether he really meant that he loved you and wanted to marry you, or if something within him made you feel that he did not mean it. Beware of him. Intuition rarely fails.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Have been using peroxide and ammonia to get rid of superfluous hair. How long will it take? (2) Six weeks or more. Never use the ammonia and peroxide on the same day and never mix them.

Glimpses of Married Life

By Mrs. Eva Leonard

Nell opened Dick's letter and read: "Dear Little Dick: I am sitting in the living room, writing on the arm of the Morris chair. Dr. Ellison has just left. I had him over to help me through with the evening. I never knew weeks to have so many evenings in which I have had him over. He is only two weeks since you left."

"The doctor told me about his visit at Detroit and mentioned young Mr. Joplin's being there. He said to me, 'He's a fine young man and of good family. I suppose he's the young lady referring to you.' I told him that I very much doubted it, that my latest advice was to let Mr. Joplin disappear from the horizon."

"He sat up with a perk and gave a little whistle. 'You don't mean it!' he said. 'Some temporary youthful misunderstanding, I suppose,' he added after smoking in silence a while. 'I don't think so,' I insisted. 'I understand he's too young; not in years, you understand, I added. Just callow.'"

"He laughed. 'That's a defect that time will remedy.' 'Yes, if one wants to wait for a person to develop.' 'There was silence for a while: then the doctor said, 'Charming family. Mr. Dunn is one of the brainiest, kindest gentlemen I ever met. A wonderful friendship exists between the father and daughter. If Mr. Dunn I should be tempted to shoot a man on sight who threatened to take that lovely girl away from me.'"

"You see, her intimacy with that fine father has made all the young men she knows seem crude and undeveloped, and she cannot care for them. The relation has its drawbacks," he replied.

"She has never cared for anyone," he said.

"No one, says she is immune." "We smoked in silence after that."

After we had finished our cigars, the doctor rose and said: "Now I am going to help you clear things up here. I have no great faith in your housekeeping ability and when my patient returns she must find things as she left them." "He gathered up the dishes from our little spread and allowed me to order, for he could see, of course, that you were not a very good disciplinarian. When the last thing was put away, he remarked solemnly as he took his leave: 'I think I can trust you to look up and take care of the man.'"

"And wind the cat, I added. "Good night, Dick, I envy you," he said, looking around the cozy place. "In spite of my expectations, I have been a model housekeeper. The Jew is in good condition and I have broken nothing; not once have I forgotten to make the cat. I deserve honorable mention."

"A week from tonight I start for Detroit. My Nell, I'll be glad when this is over; it's so blooming still. I don't believe in these temporary divorces. I'd give more to hear that youngster of mine times up than to hear the finest musical composition there have been since I was born. I don't appreciate my advantages in that regard when I would have chosen the grand hum of the organ or the human tones of the violin—but not Jew. I read of a man who was in California, who had his baby cry over long distance from New York. Sensible stuff, I thought."

"Distribute yourself around all you want to this week. After I come I'm going to monopolize all of your time. See! Lovingly, 'DICK'."

Household Hints

MOST HEALTH-GIVING WARM DAY DRINKS ARE OF FRUITS

Fruit beverages are always in demand with the arrival of hot weather. They are most appetizing and healthful.

If one understands the basic principle of all fruit beverages, they will be found not only easy to prepare, but always satisfactory. The point to remember is that in making lemon, orange or pineapple drinks the first thing to do is to carefully prepare a syrup made from granulated sugar and water. The different ingredients should then be added.

Pineapple Lemonade—Boil one cup of sugar and one pint of water ten minutes; add two cups grated pineapple and the juice of three lemons. When cold strain and dilute with one quart of ice water.

Orangeade—Make a syrup as for pineapple lemonade; when cold add the juice of six oranges; dilute by adding crushed ice.

Lemonade—Make a syrup of one pint of water and a cup of sugar. To this add one-half cup of lemon juice. Lemon syrup may be placed in bottles and used as needed. It should be diluted with ice water to suit individual tastes.

Ginger Punch—Make a syrup of a quart of water and a cup of sugar. Add one-half pound of chopped Canton or crystallized ginger. Boil for ten minutes; add one-half cup of orange juice and one-half cup of lemon juice; strain and dilute with crushed ice.

Fruit Punch—Boil for twenty minutes one quart water, two cups of sugar and two cups chopped pineapple; add a cup each of lemon juice and orange juice; strain and dilute with one cup strong cold tea and cracked ice. Marshmallows may be added.

Punch—Omit pineapple and cherries in the above recipe. Just before serving add one pint ginger ale and a few slices of orange.

One quart water, two cups of sugar, one cup each of lemon juice and orange juice; strain and dilute with one cup strong cold tea and cracked ice. Marshmallows may be added.

MAKES SEWING EASY. To run a sewing machine easily and with the least possible fatigue, place the right foot high up on the treadle and use merely the toe of the left foot on the lower edge of the treadle. This gives place to the motion to the limbs—whereas, if both feet are placed flatly upon the treadle the motion to the body is that of jumping, the most tiresome of all exercises.

The difference is truly remarkable, and explains in a measure the reason some women find running a machine so much more fatiguing than others. Try the alternate motion and note the effect.

WILD ROSE CAKE. Use any good white cake recipe, bake in loaf or in layers. Put together with marshmallow filling. Ice the top and sides with any good plain white icing. Have ready marshmallows which have been dipped in to represent wild rose petals. Dip these in a cup of water, to which has been added enough red fruit coloring to make the marshmallows when dipped a beautiful pink.

The pink tablets in relatin packages are nice to use for coloring. Spread petals on paper to dry. Now cut marshmallows to represent leaves and others into long thin strips for stems.

Prepare a cup of water tinted green and dip leaves and stems as you did the petals; spread on paper to dry. Best to prepare marshmallows before icing cake, as they need to be almost dry before placing in position.

Water icing is still moist arrange the petals in wild roses, allowing five petals to each rose. In the center of each place a dot of yellow icing. A little sugar mixed with yolk of egg will do nicely. Now arrange the leaves and stems in any artistic manner. If the work is carefully done a beautiful cake will be the result.

At the Zoo. A very stout lady at the zoological gardens, says the Philadelphia Record, was seeing the lions fed for the first time, and was rather surprised by the limited amount of meat that was given them. "That seems to me to be a very small piece of meat for the lion," she said to the attendant. The man looked at her with a glimmer of amusement in his eye. "It may seem a small piece to you, mum," he said, "but it's heaps for the lion."

EXTENSIVE CHURCH LOSS IN WISCONSIN GIVEN IN RETURNS

Ekern Says 20 Per Cent of All Churches Are Struck by Lightning—Rodded Churches Safer.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Madison, Wis., June 23.—Over 20 per cent of all churches in Wisconsin are struck by lightning. This is the conclusion to be drawn from returns received by Insurance Commissioner Ekern in reply to circular letters sent to ministers of all denominations in the state. A total of 173 ministers reported losses by lightning to churches or church property, the great majority being church losses.

What is perhaps a more striking fact revealed by the returns is that out of 173 churches damaged by lightning, 164 were without lightning rod protection. Of the eight rodless churches reported four were on properties with defective rods and two reported damage to rods only. But one instance was reported where a properly rodless church was struck, and here no loss was given.

The total losses reported by fire and lightning are $15,446.75. Of this amount the lightning damage alone was $105,342.75, or 68 per cent. The losses from other fires than lightning were reported as $51,103, or slightly over 33 per cent. The lightning losses on unrodded property were $101,406.75, or about 96 per cent of the total lightning losses, while the losses on rodless property were $3,936, or about 4 per cent of the total lightning loss.

The reported losses, however, are considerably below the real losses as in several cases ministers, instead of giving figures, reported "total loss," while a considerable number of others merely reported "slight damage" or "damage unknown." A further interesting fact brought out is that a great number of churches once damaged have since been equipped with rods, and many add, "since then no damage has occurred."

A comparison of these reported Wisconsin church losses by lightning with Catholic church losses by lightning throughout the United States shows a higher ratio of loss for Wisconsin. The Catholic Mutual Relief society of Omaha, Neb., maintains a statistical bureau which covers losses to Catholic church property, according to its figures about fifty Catholic churches are totally destroyed every year in the United States, while the total number damaged every year by fire or lightning is about 400. The bureau further reports that about one-half of the fires occurring in Catholic churches are caused by lightning, as against two-thirds of all church fires in Wisconsin being caused by lightning.

C. W. Martin, business manager of the Relief Society, adds: "An experience of some thirty years has also shown that good lightning rods kept in proper repair are almost a sure preventative of serious loss from lightning."

A ONE TIME ULTRA SCORES MEANS USED TO BALK GOVERNOR

Foreign Progressive Aroused Over Tactics Employed to Discredit Philipp Administration.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Madison, Wis., June 23.—The people of the state of Wisconsin are today facing a crisis in their state government and it is high time that they were brought to a realization of that fact. This statement was made here recently by a man who has long been affiliated with the progressive wing of the republican party, but who having become disgusted with the political tactics of the "ultras" is now "just a plain republican once more." For a number of reasons his name cannot be used. "The crisis that I speak of concerns the very foundations of democratic government," he continued. "It means that the people of the state are either going to have what they want in the way of government or else they are going to submit to a government prepared for them by a few of the faithful."

Less than a year ago the voters decided that they wanted three things. First, a reduction in taxes; second, fewer commissions, and third, better business administration of the affairs of the state. Because they believed E. L. Philipp was the man best prepared to give them these things they elected him governor. A majority of the members of the assembly and the senate were also elected because the people believed these men when they said that they would support the platform of Mr. Philipp. And yet today we find that a powerful machine organized by the job-holding ultras, and some who haven't any particular jobs at all, are persistently opposing every step made by the governor. These men don't want the governor to keep his promise to the people and they are doing all in their power to prevent him from so doing. And if the people of the state don't wake up and get touch with their representatives, some of the administration measures for consolidation of commissions and better business administration may be defeated. The decision is for the most part in the hands of the state senate. All bills except a tax commission re-organization measure have gone through the assembly despite the efforts of the ultras to block them. The senate is the only hope of these men who believe that progress means an acceptance of their ideas. And they are making the most of their chance. Every senator is being besieged constantly from all sides. Heads of state departments, whose departments are affected by some of the measures are circulating the state at the expense of the taxpayers. Propaganda is being prepared in department and then printed in the ultra organs as news. Special efforts are being made against the proposed board of public welfare measure.

DOINGS OF THE VAN LOONS—And Mother Has Been Dear to Father Quite a While—

BY F. LEIPZIGER

THE PRICE

BY FRANCIS LYNDE

C. D. RHODESCopyright by Charles Scribner's
Sons.

"Oh, I don't know as you would put it quite that badly," he protested. "But you see, when it comes to marrying and settling down and raising a family, you have to look at all sides of the thing. The father, as we all know, is a cold-blooded old were-wolf; the mother nobody knows anything about save that—happily, in all probability—she isn't living. And there you are. Yet I won't deny that there are times when I'm tempted to shut my eyes and take the high dive, anyway—at the risk of splashing a lot of good people who would doubtless be properly scandalized."

By this time Griswold was gripping the arms of his chair savagely and otherwise trying to hold himself down; but this Raymer could not know.

"You have reason to believe that it rests wholly with you, I suppose?" came from the sitting chair after a little pause. "Miss Grierson is only waiting for you to speak?"

"That's a horrible question to ask a man, Kenneth—even in the dark. If I say yes to it, it can't sound any other way than boastful and—and cadlike. Yet I honestly believe that—Oh, hang it all! can't you see how impossible you're making it, old man?"

"Not impossible; only a trifle difficult," was the qualifying rejoinder. "It's easier from this on. That is the peaceful way out of the shop trouble for you, Raymer. When you can go to Jasper Grierson and tell him you are going to marry his daughter, the trouble will be as good as cured. This labor trouble that is threatening to smash you is Jasper Grierson's reply to the move you made when you let me in and choked him off. He is reaching for you."

Raymer held his peace and the atmosphere of the room grew pungent with tobacco smoke.

"I'm feeling a good bit like a yellow dog, Kenneth," he said, at length. "After what I've admitted and what you've said, I'm left in the position of the poor devil who would be damned if he did and be damned if he didn't. You have succeeded in fixing it so that I can't ask Margery Grierson to be my wife, however much I'd like to."

"That isn't the point," insisted Griswold half savagely. "How you may feel about it, or what your people may say, is purely secondary. The thing to be considered is, what will happen to Miss Grierson?"

"Why, see here, old man; if you were Judge's brother, you couldn't be putting the screws on any harder! What's got into you tonight?"

Griswold was inexorable.

"Miss Grierson hasn't any brother, and she might as well not have any father—better, perhaps. As God hears me, Raymer, I'm going to see to it that she gets a square deal."

"By George! I believe you are in love with her, yourself!"

"I am," was the cool reply.

"Well, of all the— Say, Griswold, you're a three-cornered puzzle to me. I don't know what the other three-fourths of the town is saying, but my fourth of it has it put up that you're everlastingly cooked my goose at Doctor Bertie's; that you and Charlotte are just about as good as engaged. Perhaps you'll tell me that it isn't true."

"It isn't—yet."

"But it may be, later on? Now you are getting over into my little garden-plot, Kenneth. If you think I'm going to stand still and see you put a wedding ring on Charlotte Farnham's finger when I know you'd like to be putting it on Madge Grierson's—"

Griswold's low laugh came as an easing of stresses.

"You can't very well marry both of them, yourself, you know," he suggested mildly. And then: "If you were not so badly torn up over this shop trouble, you'd see that I'm trying to give you the entire field. I shall probably leave town tomorrow, and I merely wanted to do you, or Miss Grierson, or both of you, a small kindness by way of leave-taking."

"Do you mean to tell me that you are going away, leaving me bucked and gagged by this labor outfit to live or die as I may? Great Scott, man! If my money's gone, yours goes with it!"

"You are freely welcome to the money, Edward—if you can manage—to hang on to it; and I have pointed out the easy way to salvage the industrial ship. Can't you give me your blessing and let me go in peace?"

The blessing was not withheld, but neither was it given.

"I came here with my own back-load of trouble, but it seems that I'm not the only one in the caravan," said the young ironmaster, thoughtfully. "What is it, Kenneth? anything you can unload on me?"

"You wouldn't understand," was the gentle evasion.

Once again Raymer took refuge in silence. After a time he said: "You've been a brother to me, Griswold, and I shall never forget that. But if I needed your help in the money pinch, I'm needing it worse now. I'll do the right thing by Margery; I think I've been meaning to, all along; if I haven't, it's only because this whole town has been fixing up a match between Charlotte and me ever since we were school kids together—you know how a fellow gets into the way of taking a thing like that for granted merely because everybody else does?"

"Yes, I know."

"Well, I guess it isn't a heart-breaker on either side. If Charlotte cares, she doesn't take the trouble to show it. Just the same, on the other hand, I've got a shred or two of decency left, Kenneth. I'm not going to marry myself out of this fight with Jasper Grierson—not in a million years. Stay over and help me see it through; and when we win out, I promise you I'll do the square thing."

"There's only one other way, Edward; and that is to fight like the devil," he said, speaking as one who has weighed and measured and decided. "What do you say?"

"If you will stay," Raymer began, hesitantly.

"I'll stay—as long as I can." Then, with the note of harshness returning, "We'll make the fight, and we'll give these muckers of yours all they are looking for. Shut the plant doors tomorrow morning and make it a lock-out. I'll be over bright and early and we'll place a bunch of wire orders in the cities for strike-breakers. That will bring them to time."

Raymer got up slowly and felt in the dark for his hat.

"Strike-breakers!" he groaned. "Griswold, it would make my father turn over in his coffin if he could know that we've come to that! But I guess you're right. Everybody says I'm too soft-hearted to be a master of men. Well, I must be getting home. Tomorrow morning, at the plant? All right; good-night."

And he turned to grope his way to the door and through the dark upper hall and down the stair.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Narrowing Walls.

Griswold joined the conference with Raymer and the shop bosses in the offices of the plant the following morning. Having slept upon the quarrel, Raymer was on the conciliatory hand, and four of the five department foremen were with him. The prompt closing of the shops had had its effect, and a deputation of the older workmen came to plead for arbitration and a peaceful settlement of the trouble.

But Griswold fought it and finally carried his point. "No compromise" was the answer sent back to the locked-out workmen, and with it went the ultimatum, which Griswold himself snapped out at the leader of the conciliators: "Tell your committee that it is unconditional surrender, and it must be made before five o'clock this afternoon. Otherwise, not a man of you can come back on any terms."

Then Griswold proceeded to make the breach impassable by calling upon the sheriff for a guard of deputies. Raymer shook his head gloomily.

"That settles it beyond any hope of a patch-up," he said sorrowfully. "If we hadn't declared war before, we've done it now. I'm prophesying that nobody will weaken when it comes to the pay-roll test this afternoon."

"Because we have taken steps to protect our property?" rasped the fighting partner.

"Because we have taken the step which serves notice upon them that we consider them criminals, at least in intention. You'd resent it yourself, Griswold. If anybody should pull the law on you before you had done anything to deserve it, I'm much mistaken if you wouldn't—"

"Oh, hell!" was the biting interruption; and Raymer could not know upon what inward fires he had unwittingly fanned a handful of inflammables.

"Broffin was as sure now that Griswold was his man as he was of his own present inability to prove it. "He'll make a miss-go, sooner or later," the peripatetic one was saying to himself as he strolled past the Raymer plant with a keen eye for the barred gates, the lounging guards in the yard, and the sober-faced workmen coming and going at the pay office. "If he can carry a steady head through what's comin' to him here, he's a better man than I've been stacking him up to be."

Later, a big, red-faced man with his hat on the back of his head and a paste diamond in his shirt bosom, came to join the shifting group on the office sidewalk. Broffin marked him. The man's name was Clancy; he was a Chicago ward worker, sham labor leader, demagogue; a bad man with a "pull." What chance had brought the Chicago ward bully into a village labor fight he was not long in finding. Clancy had come because he had been hired to come. The remainder was easy. The town gossip had supplied all the major facts of the Raymer-Grierson checkmate, and Broffin saw a great light. It was not labor and capital that were at odds; it was competition and monopoly. And monopoly, invoking the aid of the Clancys, stood to win in a canter.

Broffin dropped the stick he had been whittling and got up to move away. Though some imaginative persons would have it otherwise, a detective may still be a man of like passions—and generous prepossessions—with other men. For the time Broffin's Anglo-Saxon heritage, the love of fair play, made him forget the limitations of his trade. "By grapples, the old swine!" he was muttering to himself as he made a slow circuit of the plant inclosure. "Somebody ought to tell them two young ducks what they're up against. For a picaune, I'd do it, myself. Huh!—and the little black-eyed girl playin' fast an' loose with both of 'em at once while the old money-crocks eats 'em alive!"

Thus Broffin, circling the Raymer works by way of the four enclosing streets; and when his back was turned the man called Clancy pointed him out to the group of discontents.

"D'ye see that felly doublin' the fence corner? Yere a fine lot of jays up here in the backwoods! Do I know him? Full well I do! An' that shows ye what honest workin' men has got to come to, these days. Didn't ye see him sittin' there on that castin'? Th' bosses put him there to keep tricks on ye. If ye have the nerve of a bunch of hoboes, ye'll watch yer chances and step on him like a cockroach. He's a Pinkerton!"

Wabaska was duly thrilled and excited when, on the day following the storm and shipwreck, it found itself the scene of an angry conflict between capital and labor. It was a crude surprise, both to the West side and to "Pottery Flat," to find the new book-writing partner not only taking an active part in the fight, but apparently directing the capitalistic hostilities with a high hand. At half-past four it was whispered about that war had been declared. Raymer and Griswold were telegraphing for strike-breakers; and the men were swearing that the plant would be picketed and that scabs would be dealt with as "traitors and enemies."

It was between half-past four and five that Miss Grierson, driving in the basket phaeton, made a stop in front of the Farmers' and Merchants' bank.

Since it was long past the closing hours, the curtains were drawn in the bank doors and street-facing windows. But there was a side entrance and she went straight to the door of the private room, entering without warning.

Her father was not alone. In the chair at the desk-end sat a man florid of face, hard-eyed and gross-bodied. His hat was on the back of his head, and clamped between his teeth under the bristling mustaches he held one of Jasper Grierson's fat black cigars. The conference paused when the door opened; but when Margery crossed the room and perched herself on the deep seat of the farthest window, it went on in guarded tones at a silent signal from the banker to his visitor.

There was a trade journal lying in the window-seat, and Miss Grierson took it up to become idly immersed in a study of the advertising pictures. If she listened to the low-toned talk it was only mechanically, one would say. Yet there was a quickening of the breath now and again, and a pressing of the white teeth upon the ripe lower lip, as she turned the pages of the advertising supplement; these, though only detached sentences of the talk, drifted across to the window-seat:

"You're fixed to put the entire responsibility for the ruination over on to the other side of the house?" was one of the overheard sentences; it was her father's query, and she also heard the answer. "We're goin' to put 'em in bad, don't you forget it. There'll be some broken heads, most likely, and if they're ours, somebody'll pay for 'em." A little farther along it was her father who said: "You've got to quit this running to me. Keep to your own side of the fence. Murray's got his orders, and he'll pay the bills. If anything breaks loose, I won't know you. Get that?" "I'm on," said the red-faced man; and shortly afterward he took his leave.

When the door had closed behind the man who looked like a ward heeler or a walking delegate, and who had been both, and many other and more questionable things, by turns, Jasper Grierson swung his huge chair to face the window.

"Well?" he said, "how's Galbraith coming along?"

The smoldering fires in the daughter's eyes leaped up at the provocation, lurking in the grim brutality; but they were dying down again when she put the trade journal aside and said: "I didn't come here to tell you about Mr. Galbraith. I came to give you notice that it is time to quit. When I asked you to put Mr. Raymer under obligations to you, I said I'd tell you when it was time to stop."

The president of the Farmers' and Merchants' tilted his chair to the lounging angle and laughed; a slow gurgling laugh that spread from lip to eye and thence abroad through his great frame until he shook like a grotesque incarnation of the god of mirth.

"I am to turn around and help him out of the hole, am I? Oh, no; I guess not," he denied. "It's business now, little girl, and the tea-fights are barred. I'll give you a check for that span of blacks you were looking at, and we'll call it square."

"Does that mean that you intend to go on until you have smashed him?" she asked, quietly ignoring the putative bribe.

"I'm going to put him out of business—him and that other fool friend of yours—if that's what you mean."

Again the sudden lightning glowed in Margery Grierson's eyes; again there was a struggle, short and sharp, between the leaping passions and the indomitable will. Yet she could speak softly.

"What is the reason? Why do you hate these two so desperately?" she asked.

"It is not uncommon with lawyers when addressing a jury to single out one member who appears to them to be the most intelligent, and therefore the one most likely to be influenced by their appeals," said a well-known jurist recently, as quoted in Lippincott's; "but it does not always work out advantageously." He continued: "All the testimony in a case recently tried in Texas had been taken, the lawyers for both sides summed up, and the judge had charged the jury, when suddenly loomed up the aloof, said intelligent juror, against whom both counsel had thundered their impassioned appeals. He was thirty for information, and straightway ad-

You don't have to WONDER if Resinol Ointment is doing you good. You KNOW it is, because the first application stops the itching and your tortured skin feels cool and comfortable at last. Why don't YOU try this easy Resinol way to heal eczema or similar skin eruptions? Resinol clears away pimples, too, and is a valuable household remedy for cuts, sores, burns, chafings, etc. It has been prescribed by doctors for 20 years and contains nothing to injure the tenderest skin. Sold by all druggists.

HOW TO KEEP BABY'S SKIN WELL. The regular use of Resinol Soap is usually enough to prevent those distressing rashes and chaffings to which most babies are subject. This is so, first, because Resinol Soap is absolutely pure and free from harsh alkali, and second, because it contains the Resinol medication, on which so many physicians rely for skin troubles.

dressed the court: "I have been bothered a lot by two words the lawyers use here all the time. 'What are they?' demanded the court, expecting, undoubtedly, to be called upon to expound a fortiori, or some other abstruse term.

"Plaintiff and defendant," said the juror. "I don't know, just what they mean."

England's recent failure to establish total abstinence for the duration of the war led Robert V. Chambers, the novelist, to say at the Century club in New York: "It's just as well, perhaps. Total abstinence seems a little extreme. There's alcohol in everything you know. There's alcohol in bread we eat!"

"Alcohol in bread!" said a banker-poet, incredulously.

"Sure!" said Mr. Chambers.

"Didn't you ever see men get intoxicated from drinking toasts?"

How to Win. This is an age of specialization, my boy, and the only men who succeed in a big way are those who pick out some particular line of work and live with it until they get to know more about it than most other fellows. Concentration, consistent and persistent effort in one direction is the surest road to success. You'll never win in a big way—except, accidentally—if you scatter your energies.—Leslie's.

You will need no other agent to ad. They do the business.

PRESENTED TO ALL

"The Nations at War" Tells the Whole Truth Chronologically About the Mighty Struggle in Europe

Ever awake to the interests of our readers and knowing too well the distorted and often refuted war accounts that have confused the public mind, we lost no time in supplying this $3.00 book, "THE NATIONS AT WAR," to our readers for 98 cents, the pro-rated cost of distribution, together with three coupons printed daily in another column.

A Great Thirst for Facts

is indicated by the overwhelming requests for war information which we receive daily. The truth concerning Europe's awful struggle is truthfully and graphically told in this splendid book.

Get It Today

The gifted author, Willis J. Abbot, was caught in the war zone when hostilities began, and at the great risk of his life interviewed diplomats and officials, thereby securing an intimate insight into the underlying causes which have never gotten into print.

Hundreds of Actual Photographs taken under fire, of battle scenes, removal of the wounded, bringing the great siege guns into action, feeding the men in the trenches, etc., adorn its pages throughout, while many of fixed scenes tell the entire story of the first six months of this stupendous struggle which has involved the world's leading nations.

GAZETTE'S PRESENTATION

makes it possible for every man, woman and child to secure this book of gripping stories of the greatest conflict known to history, on this practically complimentary basis.

World's War Flame Fanned By Murders A Year Ago Today

One year ago today the Austrian Archduke, Francis Ferdinand and his wife were shot and killed in the little Bosnian town of Sarajevo. Gavrilo Princip, it was the act of Princip, a poor student, which ultimately resulted in ten nations going to war. These nations are, on one hand, Great Britain, France, Russia, Serbia, Japan, Belgium, Italy and Montenegro, and, on the other, Germany, Austria and Turkey. The war to date, according to conservative estimates, compiled from the best available reports, has caused a loss to the various belligerents of more than six million men, dead, wounded and prisoners, and more than five hundred ships. Of these about 20 were war vessels.

The outstanding results on land are these:

The greater portion of Belgium is under the control of Germany. Germany has been driven from the Far East.

A part of the Dardanelles is in the possession of the Allied troops. The British, French, Italian, American and Japanese troops are in the possession of German troops.

A strip of Alsace has been taken from Germany.

On the continent of Africa parts of territorial possessions have been lost by both sides.

Various island possessions of Germany have been taken by the forces of the Allies.

Italian troops are in possession of a strip of Austrian territory.

The outstanding results at sea are these:

German and Austrian mercantile shipping has been driven from all the open seas.

German and Austrian war vessels having a total displacement of approximately 257,000 tons have been destroyed.

War vessels of the Allied nations having a total displacement of approximately 192,000 tons have been sent to the bottom.

The greater portions of the German and Allied fleets in the North Sea remain intact.

Except for communication through Heland and the Scandian nations, Germany is cut off from the rest of the world.

Efforts on the part of the Germans to place the British Isles in a similar predicament has resulted in the sinking by submarines of hundreds of vessels flying the flags of the Allied and neutral nations.

The sinking in this manner of the Cunard liner Lusitania with the loss of more than one hundred American lives precipitated a request upon the part of the United States that such practices insofar as they might menace Americans, be stopped.

Princip's crime was committed on June 28. An investigation disclosed what was alleged to be proof that the assassin was the tool of a group of Serbians. Serbians, a considerable correspondence and negotiations, an ultimatum was sent to Serbia by the Austro-Hungarian government, which Serbia declined to meet. A week later a similar ultimatum was sent to Russia along the German border and was ordered and the following day Germany declared war on Russia. The news of this event reached the United States a few hours by the announcement that general mobilization had been ordered by the French Cabinet.

On August 2, German troops entered Luxembourg and Germany demanded free passage through Belgium to the French frontier. This was refused and two days later Great Britain dispatched to Germany an ultimatum demanding that the neutrality of Belgium be maintained. The ultimatum was rejected. German forces attacked Liege. On the same day President Wilson issued a proclamation of neutrality.

The following day saw the declaration by Great Britain of a state of war with Germany, and two days later the Germans entered Liege as the French invaded southern Alsace.

These events were quickly followed by an affirmation on the part of Italy for her neutrality, by an Austrian invasion of Serbia and by the sending by Japan of an ultimatum to Germany. This had to do with the German possession of Kiaochow of which Tsingtao was the port.

By August 11 the first British expeditionary force had completed the landing in France and on that day there began also a fierce battle on the border between the Austrians and the German troops. Five days of fighting and the Austrians were routed.

In the meanwhile the battle of Lorraine had opened and the German troops had entered Brussels, the Belgian capital.

A few days later, August 23, the victorious Germans entered Namur and began an attack on Mons, defended principally by the British expeditionary force. The next day the British troops began a retreat from their position and from then on until September 2, the German troops drove through France under the leadership of General von Kluck. Zepplins bombarded Antwerp; the French were forced to evacuate Mulhausen; the German took and swept over Longwy and reached Sedan, thirty miles from Paris, where the columns swung to the eastward. The French government fled to Bordeaux.

In the meanwhile, German and Austrian troops had met the Russian army at Krasnik was announced by the Austrian government on August 23, while on August 29 the German army under General von Hindenburg and another Russian force met a battle at Tarnoburg, which lasted three days. Louvain was burned by the Germans on the same day that the Japanese blockade of Tsingtao was lifted. The Russian army captured more than two months before Tsingtao surrendered.

Two days after the French government moved to Bordeaux the battle of the Marne was begun. A few hours before Russian troops succeeded in occupying Lemberg, the capital of Galicia.

Before the French and British troops, the Germans in France were forced to retreat as far as the Aisne. Events of the next few days included the bombardment of Rheims by the Germans, and the sinking by a German submarine of the British cruisers, Aboukir, Cressy and Hogue. On the same day the Russian troops attacked Przemysl and took Janoslaw.

British troops from India were landed from transports at Marseilles on September 25 and were immediately dispatched to the northward. Before their arrival at the destination, the Germans had inaugurated a siege of Antwerp, which resulted in the Belgian government moving from that city to the eastward. Two days later the bombardment of Antwerp began. The Belgian government remained at Ostend for about a week and then removed to Havre, France. Forty-eight hours later the Germans captured Ostend.

Meanwhile the Allied troops occupied Ypres, and a desperate battle had begun on the Yser river. German assaults upon the Allied lines between Ypres and then continued for a week and then waned.

The Germans operating in Russia meantime had been defeated after a ten days battle before Warsaw.

In Africa revolt and mutiny broke

MRS. ROBINSON DIES AT DAUGHTER'S HOME.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Evansville, June 28.—Mrs. Charlotte Emaline Robinson died Friday night at the home of her daughter, Mrs. E. J. Ballard, Friday night at 10:30. Deceased was eighty-nine years of age and is survived by four children: J. C. Eldridge, Sioux Falls, South Dakota; Mrs. J. W. Vance, Blue Earth, Minnesota; Mrs. Thos. Walcott, Evansville; and Mrs. E. J. Ballard of this city. Deceased has been united with the Baptist church for over fifty years and was especially interested in all work of that institution. The greater part of her life has been spent in Evansville. Funeral services will be held Tuesday afternoon at three o'clock at the E. J. Ballard home. Rev. Oliver officiating.

A barn dance will be given Tuesday evening, June 29th, at Gus Keen's new barn. Everybody invited.

The horse owned by S. James which was tied on Church street last night broke loose, tearing west on Church to Second street, down Second to Fifth street and up Longfield street to the Frank Wutzke residence where Mr. Kutzke succeeded in halting his efforts in that direction. The horse was without bridle and had in this some very broken bridle, this being the extent of damage done.

Eugene Montgomery and family, John Tupper and family and guest, Mrs. Clark of Belvidere, Elton Allen, wife and son, Miss Clara Lamb and Misses Bill and Thorton of Madison and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hyne motored to Prairie du Sac Sunday.

Lawrence Bullard, Richard Evans, Golden Lohr, Franklin Clifford, Fred Bullock, Martin Colony, Percy Taggart, Lawrence Jones and Rev. N. G. Oliver, returned Friday night from the "Boy Scouts" outing at Lake Kegonsa.

Fred Fellows of Lake Kegonsa spent Saturday in this city.

Miss Rebecca Smith of Beloit was a guest at the V. C. Holmes home the last of the week.

CHINESE SMUGGLERS INVENT REMARKABLE COMMUNICATION SYSTEM

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Los Angeles, Cal., June 25.—Captain C. T. Connell of the Immigration bureau here is credited with discovering a remarkable system of communication which he claims to be in vogue among Chinese smugglers. According to Connell, when Chinese enter the big smuggling rings certain secret insignia are tattooed on their bodies. This serves to carry them into the inner councils of the organizations. From time to time messages are tattooed on Chinese, Connell declares, and these human letters visit other members of their gang so the communication is passed along without watchful secret service men being aware of it, even when the messages are delivered to closely watched prisoners. The secret insignia makes it practically impossible for spies to get into the confidence of the mysterious orientals.
